

Vet Books for Africa

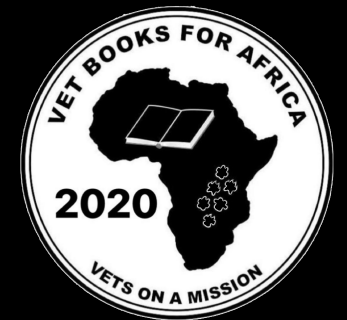

Vet students on a mission to uplift veterinary education in Africa!

Who we are....

- Our committee, Vet Books for Africa, is a student driven initiative started in 1993 by veterinary students from the Onderstepoort Faculty of Veterinary Science, University of Pretoria.
- We are a non-profit society affiliated with the University of Pretoria that solely rely on donations and sponsors.
- The committee consists of 8 students who are chosen biennially.

Eight countries. Eight students.
One health = Vets on a mission

Game Plan

- We undertake a 6 week trip, once every two years, to deliver much needed resources to veterinary faculties, rural communities, schools and other non-profit organisations, while also providing local communities with conservation related education.
- As you can imagine, a project of this magnitude requires a lot of hard work to plan, prepare and raise the necessary funds to cover the costs of all our transport and accommodation while en route as well as the collection of textbooks and equipment to hand out on our trip.

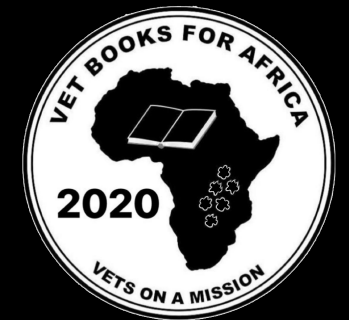

Vision

Unlocking the true potential of conservation in Africa through the education of its people.
One Health.
One Africa.

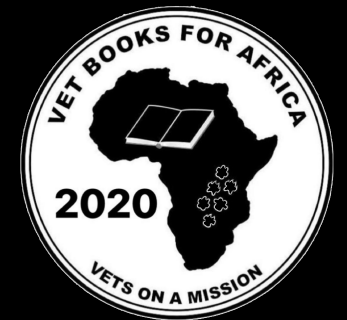

“ one’s life has value so long as one attributes value to the life of others ” - Simone de
Beauvoir

Mission

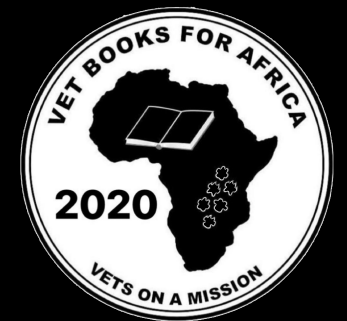

To distribute textbooks, journals and other veterinary supplies and equipment to veterinary faculties, rural communities and schools (in need of these commodities) in the various countries in Africa, while aiding and volunteering at veterinary clinics and conservation sanctuaries en route.

We strive to promote education and conservation through our actions and to unite veterinary students of Africa in order to achieve the ultimate goal of preserving this world for generations to come!

Objectives

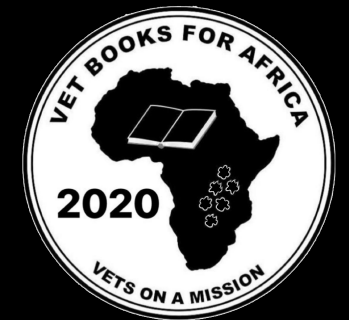

- Promote environmental awareness through education across Africa;
- Provide and distribute educational media, equipment and toys to various underprivileged schools, communities and veterinary faculties;
- Promote veterinary education thereby upholding the international regard for African veterinary faculties;
- Build and develop the relationships between veterinary faculties across central and southern Africa;
- Aid various community veterinary clinics, animal rehabilitation centres and animal sanctuaries by volunteering and delivering medication, vaccinations, equipment and donations;
- Serve as an intermediary that links people and organisations across Africa to ensure a sustainable future.

Fundraising events:

The following are events done by previous committees.

1. 94.7 Cycle challenge
2. Golf day
3. Annual Onderstepoort dodgeball tournament
4. Making and Selling supporters bracelets
5. Selling Raffle tickets.

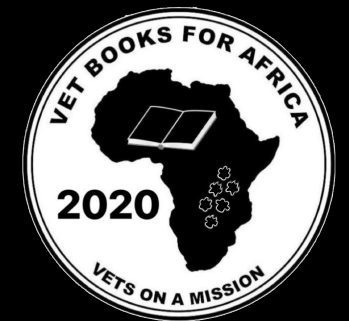

Giving back in South Africa:

The following was done by previous committees

Home is where the heart is, that is why we prioritize giving back in our own country during our two year term. Vet books for Africa partner with other societies and organisations during these two years to promote the education and conservation of South Africa.

These events include:

- Maverick outreaches - UP's one health initiative driven by medical and veterinary students that provide basic health care and education to local rural communities.
- Rabies vaccination campaign - Vaccinate dog population in rural areas
- Hoedspruit Endangered Species Centre - Discuss possibilities to help HESC

Being a Vet Books for Africa Sponsor?

The success of the Vet Books for Africa project is dictated fully by the generous support of our sponsors as well as fundraising efforts performed locally. The project is organized solely by veterinary students from Onderstepoort.

An affiliation with this prestigious project can be a valuable asset to any company wishing to contribute to a sustainable future through the development of young veterinarians in Sub-Saharan African countries. The project has both international and national audiences who are prime candidates for investment to grow a company's market.

The expenses for the project include accommodation, transport, food, equipment hire, insurance, permits, etc.

Refer to Addendum B in the Sponsorship Proposal for a detailed estimation of the projected expenses.

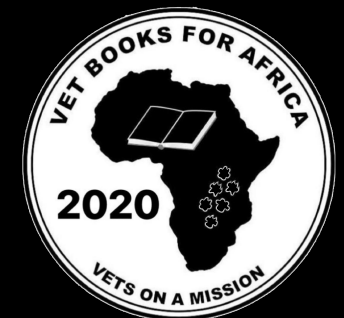

Collaboration with the Wildlife Conservation Trust

We as Vet Books for Africa decided to partner with WCT - now categorised as a project under WCT - to benefit from their funding and social media platforms. In exchange we take their name into Africa, providing them with new marketing and relationship building opportunities as well as helping them achieve their vision, mission and objectives.

The Wildlife Conservation Trust (WCT) is an entity that was founded through the efforts of many dedicated people and organisations working towards the conservation of endangered and vulnerable animal species. The WCT facilitates projects with a focus on conservation, rehabilitation and the protection of wildlife; as well as education and training programmes relating to the environment.
