1.1 Goals and Objectives

Our goal is to publish Negotiating Approval, the Betrayal of “Home” at the Borders of Identity: A Memoir and a Look at HIV Stigma in Ghana. It is an autoethnographic research novel focusing on HIV stigma and its impact on persons living in Ghana. It critiques western HIV prevention programs and its policies while focusing on the analytical framework on contemporary and historical prejudices regarding the AIDS epidemic. This innovative research was conducted by the Hip-Hop activist and scholar Kriss Jackson-Harper aka Positively Positive who is a queer person of color of black decent born with HIV and who is the company’s founder. Additionally, our second goal is to produce our very first debut album, the ‘Supper Rough Mixtape.’ It was created, drafted, and organized with the blood, sweat, and the tears from my trauma of dealing with underemployment and struggle while living in this world with so much social stratification and violence. The founder mastered their first album on very limited funds while completing their undergraduate degree in Sociology hoping to be an academic scholar for social change. Our third goal is to record our very first music video to the poem, “Love Letter to Hip-Hop,” and explore the poetic metaphors of storytelling, hip-hop, poetry, and resistance. Our final goal is to collaborate with fellow performing artists to design a performance art tour which we travel the world educating the public about our personal resistance living our life as POSitive as people living with HIV.

Our objective is to provide a social media platform, an artistic dialogue, a global art-activist online and global social community which people can connect to discuss, to blog, and post about their personal experiences living and or being influenced by HIV at the margins of race, class, gender, sexuality, disability. Most importantly, we hope to expand our global mission with other creative artists who writes narratives about the impact HIV has on their lives while critiquing systems that perpetuate social inequality. We seek to partner with recording companies, book publishing companies, hip hop artists, spoken word poets, social justice activists, freedom fighters, college professors, and organizations with the mission to spread the message of living life with HIV is to reclaim the world POSitive to reclaim it to redefine it as a POSitive light to life live is truly possible. Our professional products include:

- Hip Hop, Spoken Word, theatrical, digital media, educational lecture and performance
- Publish, design, and create new, exciting, and innovative creative works by partnering with fellow workshop specialists, artists, authors, scholars, and community members

- Provide an innovative social media platform where people all over the world can dialogue on global issues and can share thoughts and ideas
